Fend Between the Two Families Dend and Forgotten.

BROTHER OF DEVIL ANSE TALKS To a Reporter-He Gives the Lie to Recen

Sensational Newspaper Reports Concorning the Killing of Jesse James Montague-The Hatfields and McCoys Are Now Friends, and Elias is a Deputy Sheriff of Logan County.

Journal had an interview Tuesday with Elias Hatfield, deputy sheriff and jaller of Logan county, who is in that city as a witness for the defendants in the big land suit now pending in the United States before Judge Goff. Mr. Hatfield is a brother of old "Devil Anse" Hatfield, who is also at present in this city in the same capacity. Both gentlemen were aggessive members of the Hatfield side in the feud that existed between their family and the McCoya a number of years ago, but which is now a thing of the past. As an evidence of this the reporter found Elias Hatfield talking to L. J. White, a brother-in-law of old Randolph McCoy, the head of the McCoy faction.

The object of this interview with Mr. Hatfield was concerning the newspaper reports that the young man, Jessie States before Judge Goff. Mr. Hatfield

The object of this interview with Mr. Hatfield was concerning the newspaper reports that the young man, Jessie James Montague, recently killed in Lincoln county, was a member of the Hatfield family and that his death would result in the renewal of the old grudge between the Hatfields and McCoys, which was amicably settled some years ago.

"Just say for the Hatfield family," said Elias Hatfield, "that we know mothing at all about Jessie James Montague, only by report. He is not a member of our family, and when he was killed he was fifty miles from where I live and seventy-live miles from the balance of the Hatfields. The reports of a renewal of the feud that once existed between us and the McCoys are newspaper iles. That difficulty was settled ten years ago and the Hatfield and McCoy families are to-day where."

the friendless people where."

"What are the circumstances surrounding the killing of Jessie James Montague?" asked the reporter.

"The facts of the killing are just these," replied Mr. Hatfield, "This young man came down into Lincoln county and represented himself to be a sewing machine agent. The only evidence he had of being what he "The facts of the killing are just these," replied Mr. Hatfield. "This young man came down into Lincoln county and represented himself to be a sewing machine agent. The only evidence he had of being what he claimed was a small monkey wrench which was found upon his person. He said his name was Jessie James Montague and further than that nothing much is known of him. On Monday, January 6, Charles Berger and Floyd Wysong went to arrest Montague, claiming that he was a fugitive from justice. They had no warrants or authority, as they were not officers. They found Montague late Monday evening at Mark Adkins' house, eight miles above Hamilin. Berger got line a scuffle with Montague and threw him down on the floor. Montague then drew a revolver and fired up over his shoulder. The bullet went up through Berger's hat. Montague fired a second time and, inst, as he fired, Berger caught the revolver in his left hand and the bullet passed up into his arm. Berger then called to Wysong to shoot Montague and Wysong pulled out his gun and banged away at Montague and the bullet passed up into his arm. Berger then called to Wysong to shoot Montague and Wysong pulled out his gun and banged away at Montague and the bullet passed into his bowles. The injured man was pretty game, I telf you, and lived seventeen hours after he was shot. They held an inquest over him and the verdict was that he was killed in self-defense. While Montague was dying he prayed hard and denied to the last that he was a criminal. He did not tell anything about himself and his identity remains to this day unknown. An old woman named Poole, living at Beech Grove, thought it was her boy Sim, who had left home six years ago. On his day-book were some notes, written while he was a cowboy in the west, saying that he had spent his boyhood near Beech Grove. It also had upon it, some names of persons living near that settement. Belleving that he had spent is passed and forgon that it was not Sim. The body was beginning to mortify and decay. The case is a mysterious

"Yes, he shot the fellow and III tell you just how that was, for some newspapers have greatly lied about that. Troy Hatfield is my nephew. He is only thirteen years old. The man that was killed was working for the came from Kentucky, where skipped out, the civil authorities being on his tracks for robbing a store. A woman who was cooking in a shanty in the settlement for John White came from the same spot in Kentucky. The story got same spot in Kentucky. The story sor out on the fellow and he accused the woman of giving him away. He undertook to whip her and Ellas, another nephew of mine, interferred for the woman. The fellow then went to 'Cap' Hatteld's to borrow a gun and 'Cap' told him to go on and whip the old has, and mever mind the boys. The fellow got a gun anyway, somewhere, and walked back and pegged away at young Ellas, and liked to hit him. Young Troy then fired at the fellow and killed him. That was all there was to that."
"Your stories of the life in the lower end of the state are quite interesting. Mr. Hatfield," spoke up the newspaper man. the fellow and he accused the man.

"Yes, we've had some pretty exciting times years ago, but everything now is all right. I hope you newspaper men in Parkersburg do not lay every murder that is committed in the lower end to us fellows."
"No, indeed, I don't think we do," replied the reporter.
"Some newspaper men do it, though, and mix us up with every murder that happens within 200 miles of where we live."
